

CHANCELLOR'S Notes

September 18, 2009

Seasonal flu vaccines postponed

Unfortunately, we have had to postpone the distribution of seasonal flu vaccine that we had scheduled on the downtown campus next week. We received only a fraction of the vaccine we ordered and the rest of the shipment has been placed on back order.

We are not alone. Others, including the Interim Hospital, are also being shipped partial orders.

After calls to multiple vendors, we learned that they are only taking back orders right now. The FDA has to clear the lots, and we're told that this will happen in the next couple of weeks.

As soon as we have enough vaccine in hand to vaccinate our faculty, students, and staff, we will reschedule.

Thank you for your patience as we all navigate the uncharted waters of the 2009 flu season.

Updated renderings of new University Academic Medical Center released

Updated renderings of tentative designs for the new University Academic Medical Center (UAMC) in New Orleans

the new United States Department of Veterans Affairs Medical Center, currently under design.

have been released by the Louisiana Office of Facility Planning and Control, LSU, and NBBJ of Seattle, lead architects for the hospital project.

The computer-generated day and night views reflect developing architectural perspectives for the projected $1.2 billion facility, which is expected to form the core of a medical and biosciences district that includes

The new 1.6 million square-foot Center, when completed in late 2013, will feature 424 patient beds in a complex designed for expansion to meet rising patient health care needs as the population grows in the New Orleans region.

